Those who want to use it shall send an email request to the library email address (<http://biblioteche.unipv.it/home/biblioteche>), indicating, in addition to the details of the volume, also a telephone number and exact postal address where material must be delivered. It might happen that the shipment is unsuccessful or that it delays, in consideration of the general weakening of postal services.

6) Electronic resources that can be accessed online (for all categories of users)

Please note that many electronic resources purchased by the University can also be consulted online, via connection from outside the University (information available at the following link: <http://libraries.unipv.it/services/off-campus-access/>).

The list of databases, magazines and books in electronic format is also accessible filtering by disciplinary area on the page: <http://libraries.unipv.it/resources/databases/>

In this emergency period, digital solidarity services offered by publishers and editors are also available: these are access to databases, electronic journals and e-books not subscribed by the University, services to support teaching and training, expansion of the number of simultaneous accesses, additional and alternative remote access methods. The list of everything that is gradually made available is constantly updated and is reported on the page <http://biblioteche.unipv.it/servizi-bibliotecari-per-emergenza-covid-19#part5>

There are also important initiatives, such as open access to the World Digital Library:

<https://www.wdl.org/en/>.

This, and many other freely accessible resources, can be consulted starting from the page available at the following link: <http://biblioteche.unipv.it/home/risorse/banche-dati>.

6.1) MediaLibraryOnLine - MLOL (for all categories of users)

In addition to the above services, please note that you can access the MediaLibraryOnLine (MLOL) service, the first Italian network of public, academic and school libraries, which allows you to consult e-books of major publishers and newspapers from all over the world, to listen to music and audiobooks in streaming and downloads, as well as to access hundreds of thousands of other digital resources.

For further information, please consult the page <https://openweb.unipv.it/openweb/mlol>, on which presentations and webinars for users are also available.

To discover the MLOL contents, you can start from our online catalogue in the OpenWeb version: by starting a search, in addition to the results normally proposed, at the bottom right there is a widget showing the MLOL contents. You can also search from the MLOL Lomellina-Pavese portal.

A part of these resources is freely available, another part is accessible with a username and password. Anyone interested in accessing reserved resources can register, and therefore access with his/her credentials, by sending an email to the "Carlo Bonetta" Municipal Library of Pavia at the following address: bonetta@comune.pv.it, specifying to be related to the University of Pavia and indicating the personal tax code number (codice fiscale).

Registration is free and will be managed directly by the "Carlo Bonetta" Library, which will send the access credentials to the MLOL service via email.

For further updates and for information on the University electronic resources and library services, please consult the portal of the University Library System on a regular basis at the following link: <http://biblioteche.unipv.it> and in particular the page on Library Services during Covid-19 emergency, close-up in the news box (<http://biblioteche.unipv.it/servizi-bibliotecari-per-emergenza-covid-19>).
